Dot Employees Take Pride in Their Workplace

BURLEY, Idaho – Employees at Dot Foods' Burley warehouse initiated a new celebration on March 12 – Pride Day. More than 30 employees and even one employee's child worked together to freshen up the facility, giving it a thorough cleaning and doing touch-up painting.

"We really take pride in our facility, and we feel it's important to maintain it," said Terry Andrew, HR manager. "Some employees even came in on their day off to help out. And many of them got to work in a different part of the building they normally don't see."
